Look, we get it. Buying beer can be a proper pain.

The market is currently saturated with so many beer brands and types, it is often incredibly hard to find the right beer for you. Do you want a pale ale, an IPA, a stout or a cider, or do you try something new at the risk of not liking it and wasting your money?

Wouldn't it be great if you could choose any beer, wine or beverage from anywhere around the world, and have it delivered straight to your tap? With no wires, pipes or delivery costs to get in the way, you can get the beer you want, straight from the brewery, at any temperature you want, instantly.

From our tap to yours.

Hopper.

Branding elements.

The branding is influenced by traditional Bavarian colours and design language of the time, whilst being updated for a current audience. Furthermore, the name Hopper derives from the hops used to make beer, a way of dispensing and the act of jumping from place to place.

Wave pattern imagery used to infer alcohol without being too obvious.

Hopper.

Packaging.

Due to the nature of the Hopper tap being only available to order online, commercial marks such as bar codes can be removed, leading to a less cluttered and easier to read layout, which also lowers the cost of printing the packaging.

Hopper.

The tap.

Due to the nature of teleportation, and therefore a lack of pipes and wires, the Hopper tap can be placed basically anywhere – it can even be taken with you outside.

Easy-clean materials.

Status lights: ready to pour, working as usual & maintenance needed.

Capacitive touch button for pouring.

Hopper.

App screens.

The app works as the way to control the tap. With it, you can choose any beer or alcohol you want, from any distillery or brewery from around the world, and have it sent straight to your tap at your preferred temperature – a much more cost effective service than delivery.

Hopper.

Posters.

Hopper.

Pop up bar.

Hopper taps will be placed upon glass pedestals in the pop-up bar to highlight the lack of pipes or wires connected to the tap itself, thus drawing attention to the nature of the technology being used.

A journey into a black hole

Black holes are often associated with 'heavy' science – equations, quantum physics and theories around space time. Black holes are truly interesting anomalies in space however the knowledge you often need to understand them puts most people off. This book is a typographic journey, telling people what happens when you fall into a black hole whilst avoiding all the information that people don't want or need to know.

When an object gets pulled into a black hole, it is spaghettified by the insane forces of gravity – the book literally reflects this through its concertina structure and its slowly devolving and warping type the further you read on.

Black holes are so powerful that not even light can escape – the further you get into the book, more colour drains from the page, with the spot gloss showing a complete lack of light.

So what would happen if you fell into her?

The life-cycle of a star is that of a constant battle between the forces of gravity pulling it in, and the pressure pushing out.

condensing down into an infinitely small point with infinite gravity.

When all of a star's fuel is used up and the fusion inside its core turns off, it is gravity that takes the upper hand. The star's mass is forcibly compressed into itself, crushing and

A singularity.

This is it. The event horizon. The point of no return. This is the boundary at which the gravitational pull of a massive object becomes so great that even light cannot escape.

To an outside observer watching, as you reach your untimely demise, you seem to freeze in space. Light cannot exit through the event horizon.

Space itself is falling towards the singularity faster than light itself.

This is the last thing anyone will ever see of you.

DIABLO BITTERS

Originating in Venezuela, bitters are to be dashed into cocktails and other alcoholic drinks, to add another edge and another flavour profile. At the current time, most bitters are aimed at bartenders and cocktail connoisseurs, not the general market. Therefore how can we keep it both grounded in its cultural and historical roots, whilst pushing bitters to a new target audience of Millennials and 'Gen Zs' who want to try something exciting, fresh and new?

Branding elements.

The main brand type shows the chaotic and playful nature of devils, demons and tombstones, whilst not leaning too heavily into religious aspects to both avoid alienation and to appeal to a newer and younger target audience.

Bottles

The labels draw parallels to the carnival atmosphere – during the day all seems quiet, and the illustrations fade into the background, however as the night slowly draws in, the label comes alive with glow-in-the-dark ink illuminating the bottle from the inside.

Diablo Bitters.

Pre-mix cans.

The grab-and-go cans are aimed at those who are after a high quality pre-made drink, without the hassle of having to measure out what spirit goes with what mixer & bitter combo.

Diablo Bitters.

Brand range.

When partnering with a bar or pub, drinks using the bitters can be poured into branded glasses, further extending the brand outside of the physical cans and bottles.

Diablo Bitters.

Posters.

Similarly to the bottles, the posters have multiple versions – during the day, they are bright and punchy, with the illustrations acting as spot gloss – always there but only visible from certain angles.

Diablo Bitters.

Illuminated posters.

However, as night draws in, the carnival comes alive and the devils and demons start to awake, so do the posters – transforming into a whole different beast.

Diablo Bitters.

Bar sign.

The neon bar sign is to be placed above the bitters at establishments which have partnered up and sell the drink.

As guys, talking about our mental health can be tough. If we're ever feeling down we're told to 'man up', to 'stop being such a girl' and to 'just be more happy'. Over 4/5 of suicides are by men.

Talk is targeted at men aged 16 to 45, with the aim of creating an atmosphere where talking about your mental health is widely accepted and even encouraged. Many men currently don't connect with existing campaigns as they don't believe that they are worthy of receiving help.

This needs to change.

Talk.

Branding elements.

Each icon and logo can be swapped and changed, and when it's mixed with the random nature of the polygonal backgrounds, it means every poster is different, linking to how every person with mental health is different as well.

Talk.

Public interaction.

Many people suffering with mental health problems don't believe that they are worthy of help, therefore these icons will be used when telling those with mental health issues that they are in fact worthy of getting help – who will you do it for?

Talk.

Public interaction.

Posters are placed in areas where the general public are most likely to interact with the brand, with the amount of copy reflecting this.

Deadline.

As designers, we'd all wish we could just have 'one more week', or 'just a few more days' to finish off a project. There's a saying that a project is never really finished. Even when you've handed it in, you could still have worked on it more, endlessly tweaking the kerning and adjusting letterforms to the n'th degree. Maybe there were some ideas you had to leave on the cutting room floor in favour of others, or maybe the design route you chose ended up going out not with a bang, but with a whimper instead.

Deadline is a creative's almanac for the past, present and future. You can explore the ideas you left behind, you can see if a client is ever actually going to pay you, or if you're simply going to finish at all.

A deadline is final, so why should the work leading up to it be?

Deadline.

The Deadline device.

To stop every studio owning a Deadline, they are hard to get – you've to know someone to get one. As such, it might be best for end users to hide the fact that they own one. Inspired by classic Braun design, it can look like a simple radio to anyone trying to find said device.

Deadline.

Front page mockup

Everyone's work-flow is different – some might spend their time in the kitchen working, or some in a coffee shop. Deadline is made to work around the user, and as such, it can be both attached to other objects to streamline said person's work-flow.

Deadline.

Mockups.

Due to the almanac's portable size, both the typeface itself and its size on the page have been scaled up so it is easily readable at a distance, with red being utilised to draw the attention of the reader to important areas of text or information on the page.

Deadline.

Flats.

The almanac is split into sections, showing the end user not only how to control the device, but use case examples, safety and things they probably shouldn't be doing with the device.

Safety - where have you been before? A creative's guide to the past, present & future. 15

Keep a note of where you've been before.

Time is a fickle thing. To make sure you don't get yourself caught out, keep a note of where you've already visited, & what ideas or insights you got there. It would be disappointing to give a big client a shiny new brand, to later find out you've double crossed yourself in the future.

Use cases. A creative's guide to the past, present & future. 29

So, how can you use it?

The Deadline device is a nuanced machine which allows you to explore time in multiple dimensions - here's a few examples of ways in which you can use the deadline machine to get the most from it.

Use cases - time extension. A creative's guide to the past, present & future. 33

Running out of time? Just add a few weeks.

It's literally in the name. Everyone has thought at some point that they would like another two weeks or even another month to make a hand-in - well now you can. Deadline will let you pause time as and when you need it, so you can fit more hours into your already packed day.

What not to do - be a dick. A creative's guide to the past, present & future. 41

Just try to be a nice person overall.

If your colleague has come up with a great idea, try not to go into the future, steal it from them and then present it to a client just before them.

Just don't.

~~You're better than that.~~

Thank you.

Segway Tour Guide / Graphic Designer & Photographer.

Southern Segway Day Tours: 2016 - Present

Segway tour guide based in Leeds Castle, interacting with over 500 customers on a weekly basis. Providing teaching on how to ride a segway, assisting in day to day running of the company and liaising with the Leeds Castle estate.

Design Intern

Accept and Proceed: July 2019

Toolkit development, grid layouts, photo retouching and ideation towards a to-be-announced Nike initiative. Internal work for A&P including 3D visualisation / modelling and layouts.

3D Modelling

UFO Studio for VICE & The Old Blue Last Beer: March 2019

Modelling, lighting and texturing for Old Blue Last Beer. Used as pre-visualization for final photography and filming.

3D Modelling / Graphic Designer

Baker & Hill for WETA / PBS: June 2017

Created a 3D rendered map to show an educational look into the Lewis and Clark Journey across North America. Whilst not used in the final website, the render was used as previsualization for the final animated design.

Design Intern

Rye Design: June-July 2016

Shadowed lead designers, gaining experience in both industry practices and the rebranding of multiple clients. I was present in several client meetings, providing new insights and assisting in the development of live briefs.

Key skills.

My jobs in the design industry have taught me how to deal and converse with clients, how to interact with design leads and work alongside other members of a larger team.

My experience working at and with Southern Segway has given me great interpersonal skills; dealing with customers on a daily basis and working out their specific needs and sorting out queries they might have to ensure they have the best experience possible. Furthermore, teaching customers how to ride a Segway has given me skills that allow me to talk through problems and find new ways to gain results.

Software.

Self taught and experience in Blender 3D, with great knowledge in Photoshop, InDesign, Lightroom and Illustrator with competent skills in Premiere Pro.
