

Lauren Luxon

Something off putting, morbid and cute. all mixed together in a crazy imagination.

Survival Horror

This piece is from one of my final projects, where we had to write our own brief and create work that followed that theme. I chose to do something horror-themed, this piece would've been the inventory for the game; being a medical tray, with a weapon, health item slot - another tray inside of it. that has the health bar and concept for a sanity bar.

These pieces are from the same brief. Showing what the disc and the box art would look like if this was a real game, also including a game asset which would've been one of the weapons included within this game.

Lincoln Cathedral

For this brief we had to create something that would go into the giftshop for the cathedral, for this i looked into different Lincoln myths and created some tarot cards based around some of the history.

World Illustration Awards

These pieces are based around taking a classic novel / story and putting my own twists on it. for this, i wanted to do something Alice in Wonderland related but a horror version of it, these pieces show a off putting tea party - with the Red Queens head as the main dish! a more sinister nod to her 'Off with her heads!'

The mad hatter

Alice

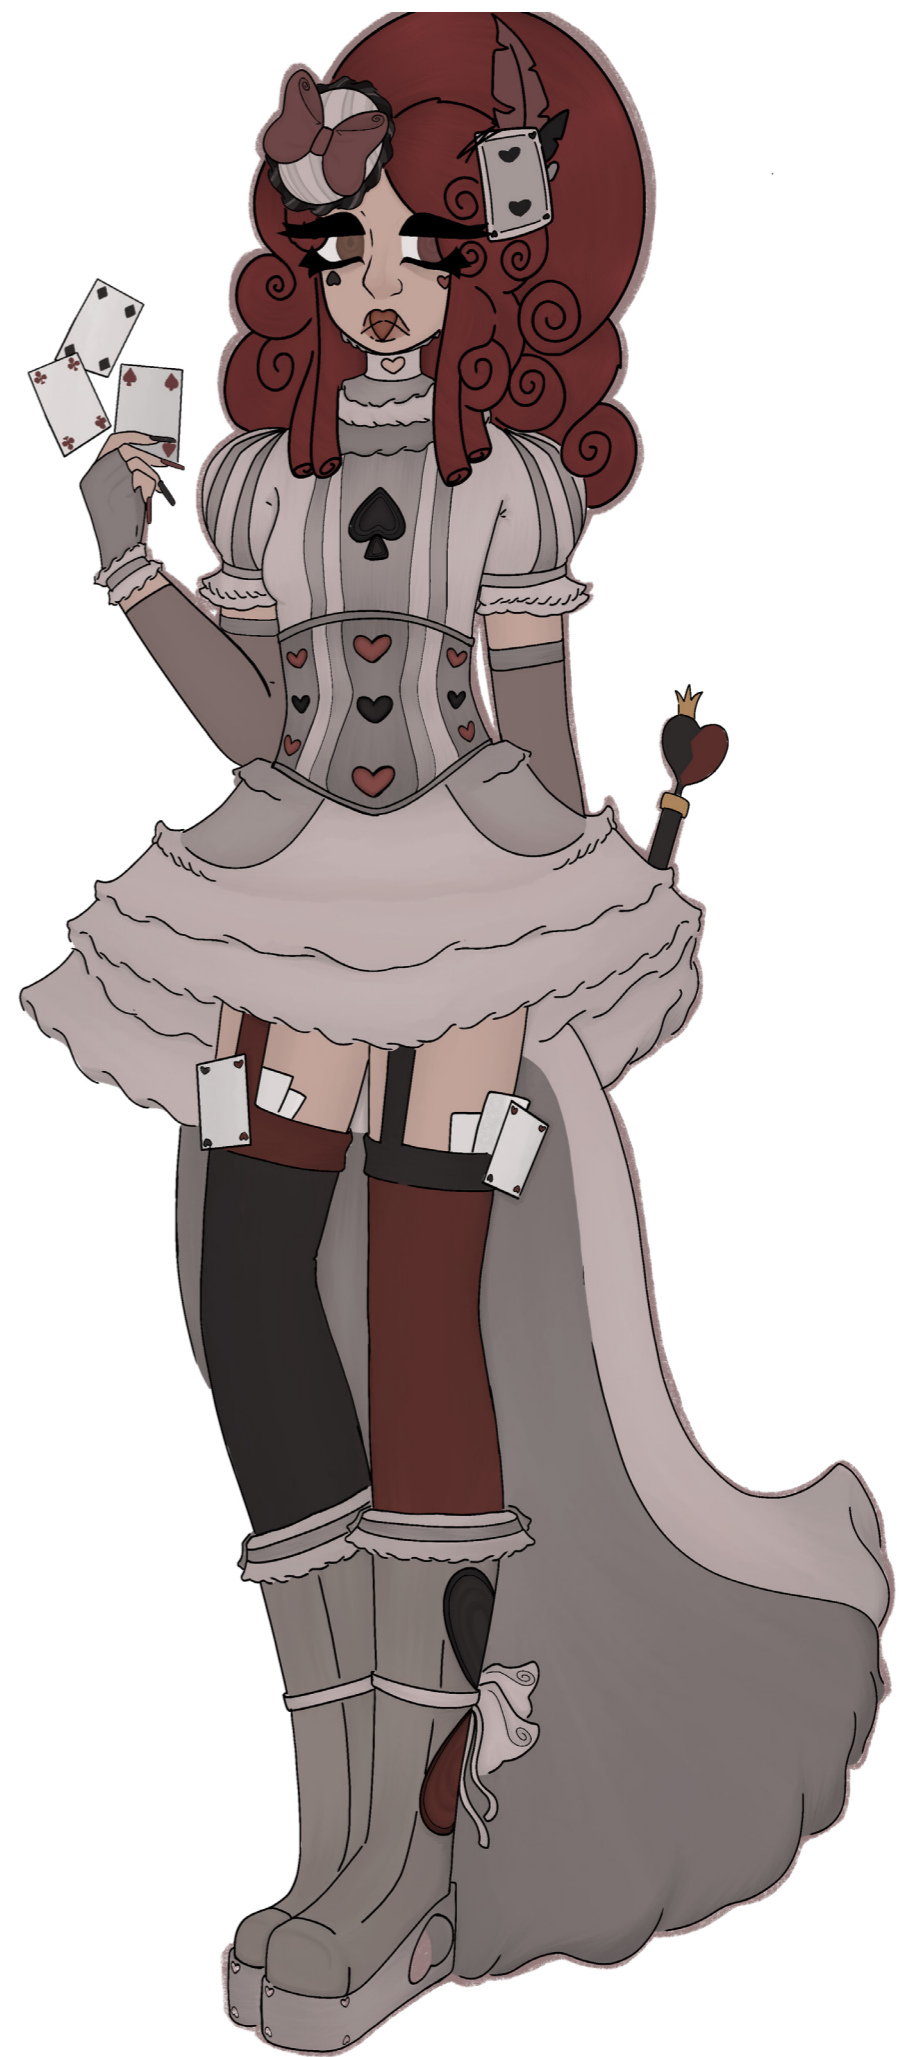

The Red Queen

Alice

These are also for that brief, i wanted to create some designs that would make it my own but would also still keep it in the Alice theming - over time these designs were changed and even scrapped.

Alice In Wonderland

Books and Storytelling

These following pieces are from a second year brief, where we had to create a book that would be aimed toward young children. mine was about loss of a pet, but i wanted to put this twist on it, so it became about a mermaid and her catfish.

When I was younger

My Parents brought me a cat

I named her Pearl

is found and lost

 Spacedblues

 Spacedblues@gmail.com